Peter Bevan-Baker gives notice that he will ask the Premier and Minister responsible for Justice and Public Safety the following question:

In the document "Children's Lawyer Position", tabled by the Premier in the Legislature on 26 April 2017 as part of Documents used in supporting a child lawyer position versus a child advocate position, the cost of setting up a Child's Advocate Office on Prince Edward Island is estimated as $700,000 to $1.3 million annually.

Please provide all information used to develop this estimate, including but not limited to:

- the list of services that the office would provide;
- the number of staff (full time equivalent positions) required to carry out those services; and
- the functions and roles those staff would serve.
