Questions to the Department of Justice

I received the following question from a constituent:

“Something I've been thinking about... when I see a potential drunk/high driver, I am very intimidated at the thought of dialling 911 to report. [...] Since we have other “#11” numbers for road conditions, health concerns, etc. could the government not allocate a 3 digit number to report concerns on the roads?”

1. Have you received other requests to add a three-digit number dedicated to reporting impaired drivers?
2. What are the approximate estimated costs associated with implementing a new “#11” number?
3. Is this something you have considered, or will consider implementing?
